Beauregard on Sherman.
New Orleans, Feb. 15, 1876.

My DEAR SIR: I regret to find from your letter of inquiry that Gen. Sherman seeks to establish one of those violations of the rules of civilized warfare which characterized his campaign through Georgia and South Carolina by the easily-refuted slander to which you call my attention, namely, that in his employment of Confederate prisoners during that campaign he sought for and dug up torpedoes, he acted "only in retaliation" for like employment of Federal prisoners by Confederate commanders—an assertion reckless even for Gen. Sherman, whose heedlessness of what he writes and speaks was notorious before the appearance of his Memoirs.
I myself can recall no occasion when Federal prisoners were or could have been employed as alleged by that General, even had it been legiti-mate and not a shocking inhumanity to do so; that is to say, I don't believe General Sherman can specify, with date, any place that came into the possession of the Confederates during the war, where torpedoes were planted, which they had to remove either by resort to the use of Federal prisoners or any other means. There certainly was never such a place or occasion in the department which I commanded.

I recollect distinctly, however, learning immediately after the fall of Savannah that Gen.
Sherman himself had put Confederate prisoners to this extraordinary use in his approach to that city, as also after the capture of Fort Mc-Allister, and I thereupon made, through my chief of staff, Colonel G. W. Brent, a requisition on our Commissary of Prisoners of War, General Winder, for a detachment of Federal prisoners, to be employed in retaliation should the occasion recur. I further recollect that Gen. Winder answered that under his instructions he could not comply; also, that to his belief prisoners could not rightfully be so employed.

That Gen. Sherman, as I had heard, at the time did so employ his prisoners stands of record at page 194, vol. 2, of his Memoirs.
On the 8th (December, 1864) as I rode along I found the column turned out of the main road marching through the fields. Close to one of the corners of the fence was a group of men standing around a handsome young officer whose foot had been blown to pieces by a torpedo planted in the road; he told me that he was riding along with the rest of his brigade of the Seventeenth Corps, when a torpedo, trudged on by his horse, had exploded, killing the horse and literally blowing off all the flesh from one of his legs. I saw the terrible wound, and made the full inquiry into the facts. There had been no resistance at that point, nothing to give warning of the danger, but with friction matches to explode them by being trodden on. This was not war but murder, and it made me very angry. I immediately ordered a lot of rebel prisoners to be brought from the provost guard, with picks and spades, and made them march in close order along the road so as to explode or discover and dig them up. They begged hard, but I reiterated the order, and could hardly help laughing at their stepping so gingerly along the road, where it was supposed torpedoes might explode at each step, but they found no other until near Fort McAllister.

Here we have his own confession that he ached a mass of unarmed men, prisoners of war ahead of his column to explode torpedoes which he apprehended were placed in the approaches to a strongly fortified position, his ability to carry which he greatly doubted, as may be seen from his Memoirs.

He does not pretend that he acted in retaliation, as at all, but because, forsooth, he was angry that one of his officers had been badly wounded by a torpedo which had been planted in his path, "without giving warning of danger." Surely his own narrative, with its painful levity, gives as bad a hue to the affair as Gen. Sherman's worst enemies could wish.

It remains to be said that he omitted mention of another instance of this unwarrantable employment of prisoners of war. After Gen. Hazen, (on December 13, 1864) had handsomely assaulted and carried Fort McAllister, Gen.
Sherman, in person, ordered the Confederate engineer officer of the fort, with sixteen men of that garrison then prisoners of war, to remove all the torpedoes in front of the fort which might remain unexploded—gallant soldiers, who under their commander, Col. E. C. Anderson, had "only succumbed as each man was individually overpowered." (Gen. Hazen's official report.) Col. Anderson, in his report, says:
"That hazardous duty (removal of torpedoes) was performed without injury to any one; but it appearing to me an unwarrantable, and improper treatment of prisoners of war, I have thought it right to refer to it in this report."

Gen. Sherman might, with equal right, have pushed a body of prisoners in front of an assaulting column to serve as a gabion filler.
The manner of relating the incident, which I have quoted in his own words, is calculated to give the impression that the use of torpedoes is something so abhorrent in regular warfare that he could subject his unarmed prisoners to the hazard of exploding them and deserve credit for the act—a strange obliquity in the general in chief of any army which has at the present moment a special torpedo corps attached to it as an important defensive resource to fortified places—in one who, moreover, was carefully taught at West Point how to plant the equivalent of torpedoes, as known to engineers of that date, i. e., crows' feet, trou de loups, longueuses mines.

For my own part, from the day of the captivity of Fort Sumter in 1861, when, in order to save a brave soldier and his command from all unnecessary humiliation, I allowed Major Robert Anderson the same terms offered before the attack, and to salute his flag with fifty guns and go forth with colors flying and drums beating, taking off company and private property, down to the close of the war, I always favored and practised the most liberal treatment of prisoners. At the same time, however, I always urged the policy of rigid and prompt retaliation, at all costs, for every clear infraction of the settled laws of war; for history shows it to be the only effectual method of recalling an enemy from inhuman courses.
Washington never hesitated to apply this painful remedy during our Revolutionary war. I am yours most truly, G. T. BEAUREGARD.

LEDGER'S FLUID (RED), THE UNI-VERSAL DISINFECTANT. (Permanent of Soda.) It is the only true disinfectant known, all other preparations sold for this purpose being merely deodorizers (or articles which possess the property of overpowering unpleasant smells by their own pungent and often disagreeable and dangerous qualities.) It is particularly adapted for disinfecting sick rooms in cases of typhus fever, small pox, cholera, scarlet fever, diarrhea, and all contagious diseases, and for purifying rooms in which there are dead bodies, removing all odors, and leaving a pleasant and healthy atmosphere. It is also a powerful disinfectant for all kinds of filth, and is invaluable, keeping them in a perfectly wholesome state, by merely sprinkling the disinfected fluid over the floors and walls. It keeps dust, dirt, water closets, drains, urinals, &c., sweet and wholesome, by using it once or twice a day. For sale by
